GENERAL INFORMATION

The platting process (sometimes referred to as the subdivision process) also ensures that all lots comply with the North Richland Hills comprehensive plan and other development regulations. A plat creates a legal building site and is generally required before a building permit or certificate of occupancy can be issued. Plats are reviewed for compliance with regulations regarding lot size and dimensions, street access and size, public utility provisions, and drainage and flood protection. State law sets out the general requirements for plats, and the City subdivision regulations establishes the process and standards for approval.

What is a subdivision plat?

A subdivision plat is a survey, prepared by a licensed registered surveyor, of property describing the dimensions and location of lot lines, streets, rights-of-way, and easements. A plat also establishes the lot, block, and subdivision name used in real estate transactions. Plats are reviewed and approved by the City and filed in the Plat Records of Tarrant County. A plat is not the property survey required by mortgage companies when closing the sale of property.

When is a plat required?

Platting is required in several situations. Generally, a plat is required when:

- Your property is vacant and has never been platted and you wish to build a new structure on your property.
- You wish to divide the property into lots or rearrange the existing lots.
- You are selling a portion of your property.
- You own two adjacent lots and wish to build over the common lot line.

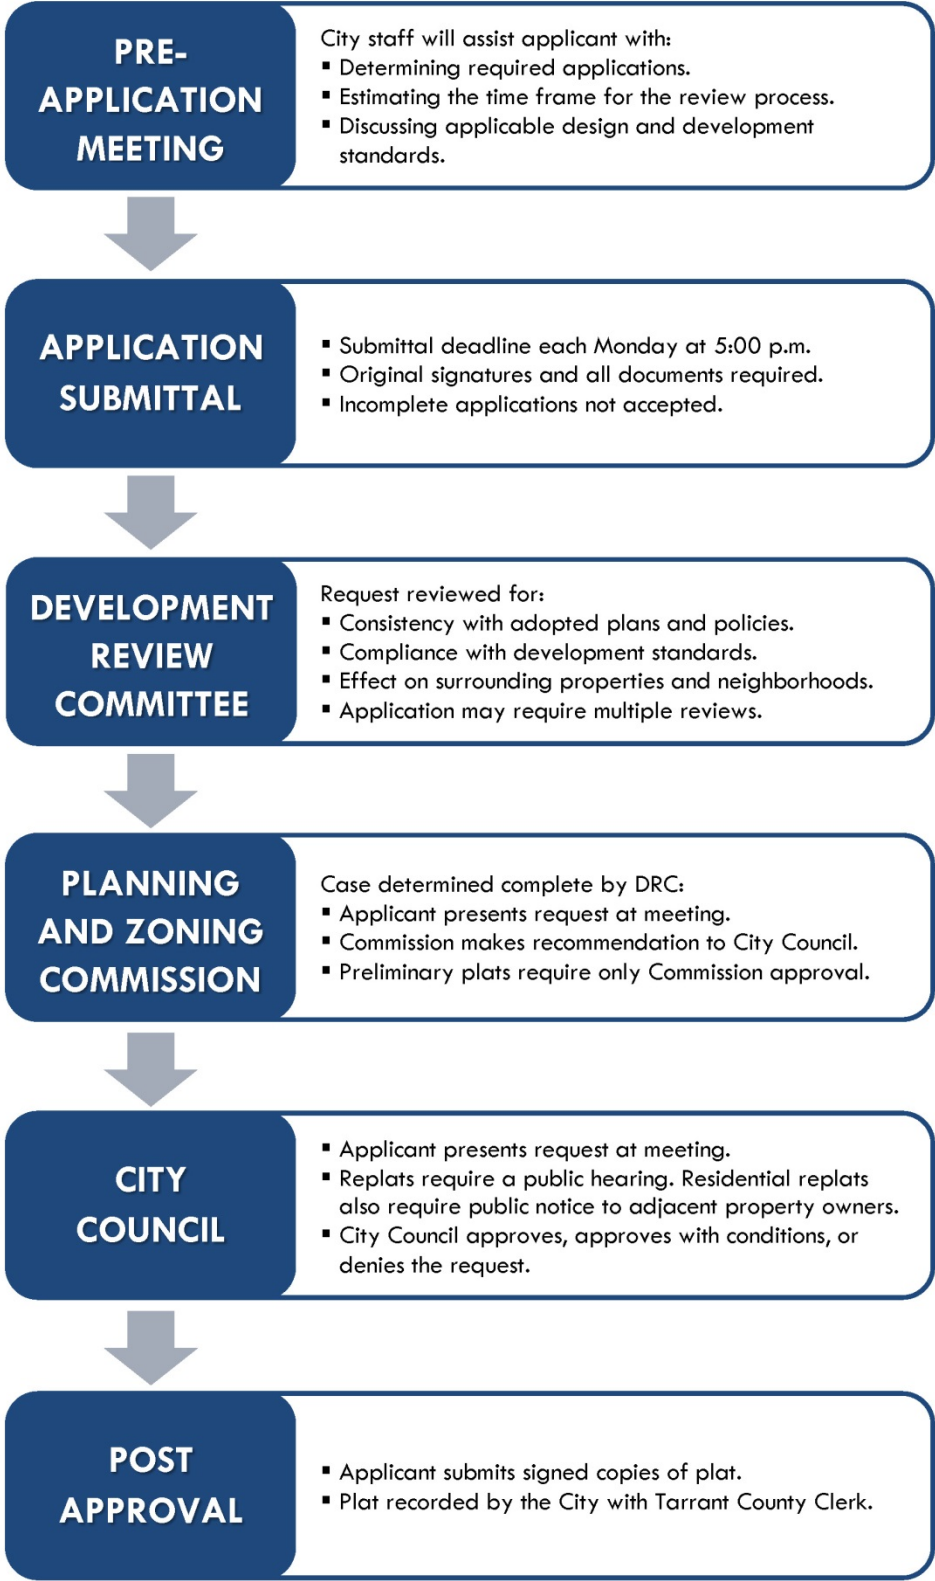

Who approves plats?

The Planning and Zoning Commission reviews and approves preliminary plats. The Commission also reviews and makes recommendations on final plats, replats, short form final plats, and amended plats. The City Council has final approval of all plats except preliminary plats.

What happens after approval?

After plats are approved, original signed copies of the plat are distributed for appropriate City certifications, signatures, and recording with Tarrant County. The applicant must submit two original prints of the completed plat and copies of the original tax certificates showing a zero balance. Plats are taken to the Tarrant County Clerk for filing as needed.

The graphic below describes the major steps of the platting process. The length of the process varies depending on the complexity of each project. Typically, the process could run at least 12 weeks from application to final action.
